Satish Jacob

Satish Jacob is one of the best known and most trusted voices for Indians whose sole source of dependable news from the 1970s to the 1990s was BBC World Service. He has had a distinguished career as one of India's best radio journalists.

Mr Jacob began his journalistic career in print with The Statesman. He worked in Ethiopia for eight years, and joined the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) in 1978. He has covered the Biafra War, the Middle East War, the collapse of the Janata government and, with Mark Tully, the Punjab terrorism crisis and the attack on the Golden Temple as well as Mrs Gandhi's subsequent assassination.

He also reported on the Bhopal gas leak disaster. Jacob covered the Iraq War and overthrow of the Saddam Hussein government. He retired in 2003 as Deputy Bureau Chief of the BBC in Delhi after 26 years of service.
